

The Washington Post

Monday September 10, 2007

SORRY, YOU'RE NOT ON THE LIST

BY MARISSA NEWHALL — THE WASHINGTON POST

Earnest good times at the Good magazine party Friday at the Hirshhorn.

One in an occasional series of dispatches from parties you should have crashed.

Site: Hirshhorn Museum.

Occasion: Promotional fete for Good, an earnest new magazine that aspires to reach “people who give a damn.”

Crowd: About 1,400 Gen X and Yers, dressed nice but unshowy, from earnest give-a-damn professions (journos, policy wonks, committee staffers, nonprofters, etc.).

Draw: Music by local-hero DJ Eric Hilton of Thievery Corporation.

Scene: Constantly changing colored lights illuminating the courtyard fountain, groovy touch-screen art displays, a dance floor that was actually full.

Bar: Open — from 7 until midnight! Sapporo Light, soymilk White Russians, vodka with Red Bull or Izzi sodas.

Drawback: Long bar lines — guests took to ordering two at a time and double-fisting.

Pleasant surprise: An unexpected appearance by Thievery’s other half, Rob Garza.

Disappointment: Good’s former associate publisher Al Gore III didn’t make it.

Overheard: “I need to do some more networking.”